Plain Talk.
Can the workmen of the United States find legal protection against the K. of L. or other trades unions?

Two years ago I was compelled to join the cigarmakers' union. Prior to that time I was working ten hours a day, on $12 work; or to make it plainer, getting $1.20 for 100 cigars. I could make from twenty to twenty-five cigars each hour, earning from 25 to 30 cents for each hour's work. A boycott was placed on the cigars made in Benjamin Wood's shop at Poston Neck, and we were compelled to join the union. Now comes the sequel. The constitution of the cigarmakers' union allows only eight hours for a day's work, a clear loss of twelve hours a week, or $2 in money. From what is left we must pay to the union 20 cents each week, work or no work, or get suspended from the union.
Aside from this, we get assessments of from 10 cents to $1 each week, just as the majority of the members of local unions feel like taxing themselves.

In fact, it amounts to about $25 a year.
Now, the eight hour rule, which causes a loss of $150 a year, $25 dues and assessments added, makes $175. How can we live? If we do not belong to the union, we cannot work in any shop in the New England States. You will ask why we submit to this? A Strasser, president of the cigarmakers' union, has the constitution so framed that any attempt to alter it must be backed by two-thirds of all local unions before it will be entertained by President Strasser. Now, I will show you the power of this man Strasser, and the contemptible cowardice of his followers. Last fall the cigarmakers' annual convention was held at Binghamton, N. Y. Almost, if not quite, the last thing done was to smuggle through a batch of resolutions, one of which read that it was for the best interest of all concerned that the internal revenue tax on cigars be retained, and that the cigarmakers' union make every effort to induce Congress to let it remain as it is. Union No. 42, of Hartford, wishing to get the thoughts of the members, took a vote on this resolution, and a majority of the members present voted in opposition to that resolution. The moment Strasser got a report of that action he sent word to them to take back that vote or he would take their charter away for subordination, as Strasser says, but it really was for holding and daring to express political opinions in opposition to his. The Hartford union did as he ordered, one member excepted.
This member wrote a letter to Strasser stating his views on the subject, and asked to have it printed in the cigarmakers' journal.
Strasser refused him the use of the journal.
He then went to the Hartford Times office and got his letter printed in the columns of that paper. Some one sent a copy of the Times to Strasser. Back came a letter from Strasser ordering union No. 42, of Hartford, to call a meeting within ten days and try that member for writing the letter; and if found guilty, to expel him. The meeting was called, the man was tried, found guilty, and expelled from the union. All this for daring to make public his political opinions.
And this is free America!

Now, Mr. Editor, will you be kind enough to give this statement space in the columns of your valuable paper, and let the people and lawmakers know how we are abused?
If the Government tax on tobacco goes, the cigarmakers' union goes, and Strasser knows it. The right to work for our families ought to be ours without buying it, which now we must do. If I am out of work for a month or two, I cannot take out a license, for it would not pay. Now, if this tax is removed when we cannot get work in a shop we can buy tobacco and live by making cigars on our own account.

CHARLES WALDOF.
Warehouse Point, Conn.
—Hartford, Conn., Times, March 24.

Rarely has the tyranny of trade unionism, as exemplified by Mr. Strasser, been more forcibly or truthfully illustrated than in the above communication to our Hartford contemporary. In view of this exposure, the simple question arises, How much longer are journeymen cigarmakers going to submit to Strasser's autocratic rule? As Jack Cade said, "It is time there were freedom for the bond."—Exchange.
